The purpose for this venue is to provide a forum for responsible collectors of ancient objects to meet, trade, educate, be educated, and can do so, within a community where shared similar standards and values are honored and upheld.

Ancientroom.com is created for the purpose of bringing people together so that interaction between members is paramount and the key to everyone's success. The business will maintain a goal of allowing users to easily contact one another; discuss topics pertaining to ancient objects; advertise and market their own items; and safeguard others from fraudulent behavior. This must be done at a fair cost to the users. The members, themselves, will be the governing body and empowered to encourage a society of discerning collectors and interested or curious others.

Simplicity for the user to navigate throughout this highly complex website should be top priority so that anyone with access to the web, and with very limited experience, can be presented web pages that are easily understood, minimally filled, and allow readily available participation.
